			Wholesale orders, customer accounts and cash flow records for the S.A. Cook general store in the village of Glendale (Mass.). Series I, Wholesale orders, 1895-1900: This series contains the bulk of the collection. It consists of itemized invoices from wholesalers, many of which were based in Berkshire County (Mass.). For the most part, each invoice contains the wholesaler's name, address and business, the date of the order, a list of the items and quantities ordered, the prices paid and the terms of the sale, and is stamped or marked paid by the vendor. While the range of vendors and products is extensive, it is not known if these records are complete for the years covered. There are also invoices or receipts for services rendered directly to the store or to the Cook household, such as blacksmithing, insurance, repairs, telephone and medical services, and receipts for taxes paid. Series II, Customer accounts, 1893-1897: Daily records of itemized sales (possibly in-store); and order books for each village served by the store, Glendale, Stockbridge, and Curtisville [now Interlaken] (Mass.), which are mostly not dated but appear to be from the same period. Series III, Cash flow ledger, 1885-1896: There are no entries for the years 1889 and 1890. In 1891, a system of double entry bookkeeping is begun. Since the S.A. Cook store was the major (or perhaps only) store in the village of Glendale, the itemized wholesale records provide information on the consumption patterns of the residents of that area for the period of time covered. They also give a picture of the range of trading and transportation of goods, since the wholesale vendors were located in a number of Northeastern cities and states. The customer account and cash flow records serve primarily to indicate the geographical range and volume of business conducted by the store.	S.A. Cook.	Store records, 1885-1900 (bulk 1895-1900).

		Contains diaries, letters, an account book, and other papers from members of the Lathrop and Lane families, particularly Clarissa Lathrop of Pittsfield (Mass.) and Jabez Lane of Stockbridge (Mass.). It is not clear if the two families are related. The earliest item is a notebook, a portion of which contains the diary of Louisa Lathrop, in which she discusses her experiences in and around Bozrah (Conn.) and Norwich (Conn.) (1814). She tells of a new cotton factory that used a power loom with flying shuttles and discusses viewing vessels that were used in the War of 1812. The rest of the notebook was used by Clarissa Lathrop to record poems, aphorisms, and other works written by others (1819-1820). Other materials pertaining to Clarissa include a recipe book (undated), documents offering herself for acceptance into a church in Pittsfield, and portions of diaries, most of which document her feelings about religion. The materials pertaining to the Lane family date from a later period. Items from Jabez Lane include two documents certifying him as a justice of the peace for Berkshire County (Mass.) for the years 1842-1855, and a notebook containing the proceedings of four cases decided by him (1844, 1852, 1853, 1854). The notebook also contains the accounts from his business as a cobbler in Curtisville [now Interlaken] (Stockbridge, Mass.) (1870-1872), and a record of his pasturing a cow on another person's property (1874-1879). The four cases decided by Lane involved John Petersen, Halsey Church, John Munn, and William Stanton, all of Stockbridge. There are papers relating to the Munn and Stanton cases included, as well as a purchase order for a pair of shoes. Other Lane family documents include a diary of John Lane, in which he discusses his experiences at school (1844-[]); two letters from John's daughter Minnie (1871); a long letter from Minnie Lane to Helen Hart about a trip to Pittsfield (1880); a letter to Minnie from her mother (1882); "Reminiscences of Father's Illness," by an unknown Lane (1867); and a genealogy of the Lane family. Additional papers include a poem by M. S. Contains Edwin Hale Lincoln's discharge from the 5th Regiment of the Massachusetts Infantry (1863 July 2); a certified copy of the discharge (19--); and a booklet containing the minutes of a 1938 meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic, which contains a memorial to Lincoln, who died that year at age ninety.

AM-204	Papers	Contains a diary, letters, articles, booklets, newspapers, and other papers relating to Marcus H. Rogers (1835-1926), newspaper publisher, writer, and world traveler. The materials are divided into four categories. The category "Personal Papers and Writings" includes a diary (1875), letters (1855-1929), writings in published and draft form (1894-1923), and poetry. There are also documents dealing with his purchase of the Berkshire Courier (1861) and the building of a sewer (1875), and financial papers (1869-1914). Most of the letters are contained in folders 2 and 3. Some of the letters in folder 2 were not written by or to Rogers. The names on these letters include Mrs. Edwin B. Allen, Pearl Hanna Williams, Frank W. Keyes, and S. Lizzie Rogers. Most of the rest of the letters were written to Rogers. Folder 3 contains letters from Rogers to the editors of several newspapers and to individuals about such topics as Abraham Lincoln, a proposed amendment to the Constitution regarding child labor, and the presidential election of 1884. In addition, there are writings about his world travels (folder 5) and the New Marlborough Town Library (also at one time known as the New Marlborough Free Public Library) in Mill River (New Marlborough, Mass.) (folder 9), as well as pamphlets on astronomy, cancer, and God (folder 10). The category "Newspapers" contains items that were printed on Rogers's first press, newspapers that he later published and wrote for, and clippings. Included is one copy (four leaves) of the Rising Sun, which was produced on his homemade press in September 1854 when Rogers was nineteen years old, and two letters (1854, 1855) that were probably produced on the same press (folder 12). There are copies of the Berkshire Courier (1878), the Springfield Republican (1885), the Berkshire County Eagle (the last one published by Rogers, 1889), the Boys Herald (one of which contains an autobiographical article on his life, 1908-1913), and the Berkshire Sun (1916-1924). There are clippings and articles about the Rising Sun (folder 10), a 1925 article about Rogers (folder 20), and photographs of clippings. Collection of published and unpublished material relating to Herman Melville, assembled by the Berkshire County Historical Society in connection with its occupancy of Arrowhead, Melville's home from 1850-1863. The collection includes family letters, original published forms of Melville's short stories, criticism and interpretation of Melville's works, and biographical material on Herman Melville and other family members. The bulk of the collection consists of printed and published material, with a number of original letters and other personal papers from the Melville family. The collection is organized into 9 categories. 1) Works of Herman Melville: includes many of his short stories in their original publication form in 19th century literary journals. 2) Melville biography: published articles and notes on all or part of Herman Melville's life. 3) Melville family: family papers of Melville's immediate family and their descendants, including original letters by Allan Melville, Augusta Melville, Gansevoort Melville (Melville's brothers and sister), and Eleanor Melville Metcalf (granddaughter); an essay about Arrowhead by Florence Melville (niece); an autograph and papers of Lemuel Shaw (father-in-law); histories, pictures, and genealogical records from the families of Herman Melville and his wife, Elizabeth Shaw Melville. 4) Melville criticism and interpretation: reviews and analyses of Melville's writings, including original copies of a number of 19th century periodicals. 5) Influences on Melville: includes primarily documentation on Melville's reading. 6) Melville Society papers: critical essays and organizational information. 7) Other Melville collections: including descriptions of collections in other museums and libraries. 8) Melville's works and life in other art forms: including play scripts, poetry, and descriptions and pictures from movie versions of Melville's books. 9) Miscellaneous items: photographs and drawings of Herman Melville, foreign language publications, publications for young readers, and ephemera.	Rogers, Marcus H., 1835-1926.
